THE THROOP DISASTER

AND THE NEW MINING CODE.

The disaster at the Throop mine in the Anthracite coal region, in which 76 men lost their lives, is thus commented on by the Pittsburgh Gazette Times:

As long as operators persist in the actual practice of sending men down into coal-mines to dig for coal we shall run the risk of precisely such terrible disasters as that which occurred on Friday last at Throop in the Lackawanna field of the Anthracite region. The moment fire got under the roof of the tunnel entrance from the slope of the mine it was out of our hands. The men at work were doomed to speedy death under the most horrible circumstances simply because no man-way had been provided for escape in case of such a contingency. And so, at a time when mining is supposed to have reached the highest development in its history, the State is called upon to record the worst catastrophe in the annals of the human development in its history. If not the best, that anthracite mining has been placed on a safer plane than the bituminous in bituminous coal fields, partly because of the greater value per unit of product and partly on account of difference in formations and conditions; but here we are face to face with a situation that shatters one's faith in the system and methods pursued.

This untoward event happens at the very moment when labor unions on one side and operators on the other are in a death struggle with the Department of Mines and the Legislature at Harrisburg over the adoption of a new code for bituminous coal mining. This code has but one purpose in view, and that is to make human life and limbs safer in the output of this fuel. It is not intended to oppress either employer or employee, or to deprive either of either one dollar of profit save as incidentally may fall out. Yet neither party to the struggle is willing to give the bill so thorough for fear that it will suffer in pocket. Both presumably want working conditions to be as near to absolute safety as it is humanly possible to make them, but when the last comes, when the State attempts to set purely in a good report but just this of the organs and libraries the country would have missed.

An inventive Allegheny youth has discovered how to make chickens lay colored Easter eggs. He is on the artistic leg.

Andrew Carnegie says his youthful ambition was to become a reporter on a Pittsburgh newspaper. It is evident that the making of a multimillionaire is not purely in a good report but just this of the organs and libraries the country would have missed.

According to the schedule, Gentle spring should be with us, but if she is she is a trifle chilly about it.

These cellar fires are getting monotonous. It should be remembered that the cellar is a bad place for a fire to gain full headway. The cellar should be watched as carefully as any other portion of the building.

The Mexican war is getting dangerous. They are actually killing people down there.

The disastrous explosion in the banner mine is reported to have been caused by the explosion of a keg of powder caused by an open light. This powder keg and the open light make a dangerous combination anywhere, but many-fold more dangerous in a coal mine.

The Connellsville painters are busy. The town is taking on spring coloring of optimistic hues.

The Banner mine was named by colored convicts. No wonder Alabama coal mines can compete with the mines in Pennsylvania. One wonders what sort of a banner this mine was named after.

Professor Duffenbaugh now holds the Morris Chair of Much Comfort.

The Western Pennsylvania bituminous miners now want to have a kind in framing a new mining code. They announce that they will consult with experts. Perhaps it would be well if they also consulted with the operators.

The McCrory fire is causing a building up in the old Greenland block.

The Aleppo mother who committed suicide because she saw visions of her 3-year old baby boy certainly must have been demented. She would have considered her duty to her remaining children, not to mention her emotional insanity.

The fever of regulation seems to be spreading. The railroad promises to have plenty of company.

Representative Hornell has introduced a bill to amend the spirit of the bill should pass. Pence should be reasonable as well as people.

The country seems to have an overplus of freight cars. Better a surplus than a deficiency.

Has anybody seen Kelly? They have. He has been seen by the Connellsville police, and is now on private view in the Allegheny county jail.

The moral courage of some people wouldn't fill a thimble.

A Connellsville boy took the trolley and went forth to seek his fortune. He stopped at Pennsylvania to find it and lost himself entirely.

The Scottish Board of Trade proposes to raise a $100,000 guaranty fund under the Williamson plan. Connellsville is taking this proposition with interest.

Colonel Roosevelt once more assured the trembling nation that he is not a candidate for President or anything else. The matter of that, it may have been well for Theodore to decline in advance any future nomination, and then it may not have been necessary. Seriously, however, Colonel Roosevelt says wisely and truly when he says he had everything an American citizen can have.

Some Unknown coal speculators are born traders and are willing to swap or bet on the slightest provocation.

Plain Smith is a name of no standing at the Connellsville court, so the Washington county court has kindly changed the name of U. S. Grant Smith, an attorney of the American Legion, to U. S. Grant-Smith. The hyphen will probably rescue the name of Smith from complete oblivion.

HAY CROP PROSPECT NOT LOOKING GOOD

Say Farmers Who Have Examined the Meadows About Scottdale.

SUNDAY WAS PLEASANT DAY

Street Commissioner and His Force Washed the Streets to Spoil Town Appearance—Order of Moose Save Banner That Blew Away.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, April 10.—The landscape was discernible for many miles around on Sunday for the air had been washed clean of soot and smoke by the many rains and winds of the last several days. The sun, too, shone from a clear sky and the day grew from a dark morning into a bright noon. Many were out walking and driving in the afternoon for the roads had dried off through the influence of wind and sunshine. The meadows looked brown and green and farmers say that the present outlook for a hay crop is not good. They say the year started with good prospects but there has been disappointment and hay will likely be scarce. If it does not show marked improvement soon. The lack of good promises for hay seem puzzling to a good many.

Moose Banner Up.
The Loyal Order of Moose have their banner strung across Pittsburg street once more, but this time there are several round holes cut in the muslin, so that it is no longer such a suitable creation as when first put up. The violent winds of last week swept the banner away, breaking the clothes lines that held it up, and this danger of the wind taking the banner a second time is the thing that the Moose are endeavoring to overcome by the perforating of the banner.

Missionary Society.
The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church will meet at the home of Mrs. J. Warren Brooks, on Arthur avenue, on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. In New York.

Thomas H. Rutherford, the stationer and agent of The Courier, has been enjoying several days in New York and Philadelphia attending to business.

Washed the Streets.
Street Commissioner E. M. Stantz and his force were out all day Saturday with the long line of rubber hose on their little breakers washing off the paved streets. Sunday morning the streets were beautifully clean and attractive to the people, and many favorable comments were heard upon the work. Now, it seems as if the White Wing, if he be put on the streets immediately, will be able to keep the streets in very nice condition. That White Wing is all right, and no money expended upon the streets is better spent than for this work. It means health and comfort to the people, and hundreds of dollars in goods in the stores that are saved from dust. The storekeepers would add to the beauty of the town if they would get out and keep the sidewalks clean. Several new sidewalks and some repaired ones would also work wonders for the town.

Were at Ruffalo.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Lester Porter of near town spent Sunday in Ruffalo at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Porter's brother, Samuel Lynn, who is quite ill.

Boyd Was Home.
Berkey H. Boyd, Scottdale's member of the Legislature, spent the short vacation of the Assembly with his mother, Mrs. E. E. Boyd of Chestnut street and is greeting old friends.

Entertained at School.
The pupils of the East Hamilton High School entertained the teachers of the township and the pupils from the eight grades of the schools at Alverton, Friday evening, in very pleasant style. There were fully 150 present in the High School building. Professors Samuel Faubold and Sherman Furstine and Miss Anna Duncan turned over the building to the pupils and a fine literary program was gone through with. The High School students also sang some songs in good style under the leadership of Miss Irene Bowers, the instructor in music in the schools. Prof. Grover Felgar, the township principal, and several of the directors were among those present.

The Flower Show.
Joseph Thomas, the Greensburg florist, is shipping a cartload of cut and growing flowers here during the week for his fifth annual Flower Show and sale in Scottdale, which will be held until Easter in the Reid building.

WILL DISCUSS WEEDS

At the Union Farmers' Meeting at Gilchrist's Next Saturday.

Selections by Mrs. J. H. Junk, W. H. Swartz and W. A. Bryson; paper, "What is a Weed?" John Gilchrist; discussion, "Are Weeds a Benefit to the Farmer in Anyway?" Samuel Junk; paper, "How Can We Best Control Our Common Weeds?" R. H. Smith; query, "Is There Any Profit in Growing Weeds?" S. W. Dunn.

With a "MUNSON WARM AIR HEATER" properly installed, with the proper sized cold air duct, there is always a pure, healthful atmosphere in all rooms.
It is coming to be more and more acknowledged by all, that plenty of pure air is the best cure as well as the best preventive of disease known.

INTRIGUE

"I suppose you're married by this time," suggested Mrs. White.

"I have never played in one place long enough to get married, except in Tennessee, and there I was too busy," laughed Phillip.

"Elsie has never forgot you," Mrs. White next observed. "She thinks about you all the time, and she's been talking about you ever since we moved away."

The connection of Mrs. White's remarks was so absurdly palpable that Rensselaer could not help letting his eyes twinkle, and Elsie, catching his glance of amusement, laughed out, "Right, whereupon the two callers joined her, very much to Mrs. White's surprise."

"You was a mighty busy young man even in that six months before we moved away," rattled on Mrs. White. "We was all sorry we had to go and leave you behind, and it nigh broke Elsie's heart. But she's kept track of you all right. She made us take a paper from back home on purpose. First we saw that you struck oil on that cheap little two acres of ground you scraped together and bought, then you bought some coal land and built a foundry and a mill and what not. I don't know what all you done, but Elsie can tell you every bit of it, from A to Z."

"Mother, did you call father?" interrupted Elsie demurely.

"Yes, he'll be right in. He's out in the garden getting around. You know he always was crazy about gardening, and he ain't working now."

"How are the rest of the family?" Kelvin asked.

Both Elsie and her mother looked concerned.

"Grace is married," said Mrs. White. "Ed got his spinster away in football game, and he's upstairs now. You must see him before you go. He always liked you so well. All three of the children did, for that matter, although none of them put a crown and a royal robe on you like Elsie did. You did, Elsie, and you know you did, and never would give any encouragement to a beau from that day to this. I'm afraid Ed's going to be an invalid all his life."

"Oh, that must be seen to," protested Phillip, shocked in spite of his embarrassment. "Perhaps a specialist could bring him out all right."

Mrs. White shrugged her shoulders. "Specialists cost money, and we ain't got it—not these times."

CHAPTER III.

MRS. WHITE came in, in a man of about forty-five and somewhat over weight. He was a plastering contractor in a small way, and although he had done no work for a month he bore the marks of his trade upon every part of his body. His hair and his mustache were graying, and his eyes were somewhat red and watery.

"Hello, Phillip!" said he, shaking hands. "So you're our Kelvin, after all. I didn't think anybody poor enough to know he could become plasterer enough to stop at the Esplanade in these times."

"I don't know why not," returned Phillip. "It seems to me that these times offer us many, if not more, opportunities than ever to acquire wealth. It is, perhaps true, however, that nowadays, even a man has to be able to get a start at all his own energy to go on up, for the big fight is in getting out of the rut. That explains, perhaps, why we have practically no middle class left to us. We have only the abnormally rich, the people who spend all their money like the poor, and the normal rich and the very poor."

"Something has to be done," suddenly exploded Mr. White. "The rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer every year."

Both Kelvin and Rensselaer smiled in recognition of that ancient "bro-mide."

"Conditions must be changed, naturally," went on White. "There never was any monarchy in the world where the condition of the laboring classes was worse than today nor where the power of money was so unlimited. Look at Henry VIII. That one man owned an enormous share of all the property in this country, and the United States government is not strong enough to collect from him that $20,000,000 fine. It has been held up in the courts for fifteen years. Some day this country will stand still and will burn and destroy itself, to the horror of the world."

Dinner time came, and still Ben White raved on. Kelvin, catching here and there traces of a rather close pinch in money matters, but not wanting to stay to dinner, but he saw that he must have the dinner. He went up to see the bedridden Ed, a youth of about seventeen, and he came down from that interview rather sober.

At the table, fortunately for the visitors, White had another topic of conversation, his gardening, but some chance remark led him back to his favorite topic—the crimes of the plutocrats against the proletariat—and he began to accuse Phillip, as a wealthy man, for his share in the existing injustice. It was in vain for Phillip to aver that he had not reached the plutocratic stage by any means, though he was perfectly willing to do so.

Phillip found opportunity before he left for a few minutes with Elsie. "Things are not going right in a business way," he ventured.

"No," she replied. "Phillip, I know that you couldn't help but see it. Father seems entirely to have lost his ambition. Ed is an invalid, and will never have been fitted for anything, but I must go to work. I must, there is no way out of it. Tell me what I should do."

"It's a hard problem, Elsie, to find niches in this busy world for people with no special training," he told her. "Stenographers earn good pay if they are competent and intelligent, but it takes half a year to learn, and even then the advancement in wages is very slow."

"I know," she replied. "I shall apply for a position as a lady's maid somewhere. I'd be green even at that, but I am intelligent enough to learn."

Phillip shrugged his shoulders. "I'm afraid you wouldn't like it very well."

"What else is there to do?" she demanded.

"I don't know," said Phillip. "I rather think, however, that the best way for me to help you would be to secure something for your father."

"He's difficult to manage. He has been very unfortunate."

"Nevertheless I think I can place him," he said.

"If you only could!" she replied. "We would all be so grateful."

Her eyes spoke her gratitude as she looked up at him, and they spoke of something else—at least so Rensselaer judged as he came upon them.

On their way home Rensselaer, who had resumed his ranch business in the presence of a ranch friend, spoke of the girl. "Miss White is a beautiful young woman, beautiful in mind as well as in face and figure," he declared. "She has developed remarkably," admitted Kelvin. "She was a little girl in when she first came to live with you. Even then I thought her pretty, but I never suspected that she would become such a beauty. It was an."

"She is much more than beautiful," insisted Rensselaer. "She is the sort of woman who would spend her whole life in the endeavor to make her husband happy, and she would succeed. I would swear that she is of even temper and unflinching steadfastness. Moreover, she is intelligent enough to keep pace with her husband, no matter what his progress."

"She is a fine girl," admitted Kelvin. "Just it is startling, though, to think how much her mother must have looked like her at the same age?"

"No," stoutly maintained Rensselaer. "Her mother is only a pitiful example of what worry and hard work and damnable poverty will do for a woman. But now the girl would make you in a minute, and you would insure yourself a life of happiness."

"You have rather a romantic imagination, Bert," laughed Phillip, whereupon Rensselaer gave up the topic with disgust.

"I did not take long for the street to know that there was a new 'bear' influence at work. When on the first morning some twenty stocks were sold in 1,000 share lots no attention was paid. When, however, on the second and third and fourth mornings the day's business was opened by the offer of 1,000 shares of each of these stocks the coincidence began to be noticed, and when the same phenomenon occurred on the fifth and sixth and seventh mornings it began to be not a coincidence, but a design, and all the day was talking of it."

The stocks had been disposed of without difficulty, though there was no particular eagerness, for the market was worse than sluggish. Now, however, a certain "bull" coterie of the railroad crowd, scenting here a deliberate attempt to force the market, combined in a more or less aggressive counter attack and within another week did actually succeed in forcing up the entire line some ten points. This action, however, had no effect upon Phillip Kelvin. Every morning he sold the monstrous 1,000 shares of each of the twenty stocks which had been chosen for attack. On the day that the bull movement had forced stocks the highest Gallien remembered.

"Look here, Mr. Kelvin," said he. "You are bucking up against some of the biggest men on the street, a group of half a dozen men, each of whom could probably swallow you whole in a financial way. If they get after your scalp I'm afraid you are in for losing a tremendous amount of money."

"You have everything margined fifty points?"

"Yes. But I have known this same group to manipulate the market to a seventy point rise."

Young Kelvin was quite complacent about it. "They are doing me a service," said he. "The margins I have put up on the stocks previously bought are ample. They are not going to force prices far enough to make you call for more margin, but if they do the margin will be forthcoming. In the meantime, however, they are enabling me to sell at a much higher price. They are playing my own game for me."

"I presume you know your own business," returned Gallien dryly, "but remember that I have warned you."

"And remember that I have warned you!" retorted Kelvin. "I'm sure you keep my cash in a safe place, and do the only one who studied Kelvin seriously.

"On what do you base that queer prophecy?" he wanted to know.

"I'm not ready to tell you just yet," returned Phillip, smiling. "But it is a 'you only' prophecy."

"I know why," put in Pellman, one of the more reckless operators of the railroad group. "It's because our young friend is on the short side of the market for all the real cash in the country. There must come a panic."

They were quick to come to laugh at Kelvin. He was necessarily "green," being young and new to the street. Rensselaer got Phillip to one side after the dinner.

"I'm very curious about the slump you predict," he said. "I hope it's true. I want to buy some railroad stock, and it can't go any too low to suit me."

Phillip looked at him in musing silence. He liked Rensselaer, a clean, well set up man, with a clean life and an honest one written all over him.

"You may not get it," he said. "I believe, Mr. Rensselaer, only, I believe, 'Outright only,' replied Rensselaer. "Then wait. There will be some bargains by and by," declared Phillip, so seriously that Rensselaer was impressed.

Kevin had been in the market more than a month, steadily selling all that time, when one evening in a private dining room with almost the same crowd Rensselaer found that he had no cash and sent down a check to the manager with a request that he send up the currency. The manager himself came up with the check in hand and very much worried.

"Very sorry, Mr. Rensselaer," said he. "But I have not the currency in the house. We have had no currency to speak of for several days. I don't know why it is, but there seems to be a 'you only' scarcity of cash."

"What seems to be the matter?"

"I don't know, sir," responded the manager. "Trade was never better. Our regular customers seem to have plenty of money, but no currency. I don't believe I have seen a thousand dollars in cash in a week, except what I draw myself for my payroll here."

"That seems to be a general complaint," remarked Pellman after the manager had left the room. "There is a scarcity of money everywhere. Yesterday my check was refused at two hotels. I don't understand it."

"Within the past year nearly a billion dollars of actual currency has been entirely withdrawn from circulation."

"They were slow to understand how this could be."

"I have seen no mention of such a withdrawal," suggested Pellman. "Where and how has this amount of money disappeared?"

"In bread," declared Kelvin. "The one commodity in this country which must invariably be paid for in cash is the bread loaf of bread."

A short laugh ran around the board.

IN THE MEANTIME Kelvin steadily sold his twenty stocks in 1,000 share lots. He became known as the "cash bear," and there were a dozen conflicting theories as to how he had got his money. Young Rensselaer took a great fancy to him and before he had been on the market a week had him in at Kelvin's for dinner with a lot of the big guns of the market. It was discovered that Kelvin distinctly knew how to comport himself in any company. The only thing of note he said during that dinner was that he confidently looked forward to the biggest crash in the history of the street. They heard this remark in amused silence, but in the main they liked him. Rensselaer, one of the conservatives of the railroad group and of vast experience, was not trust it to a bank. In normal times a bank is a safer place than a hole in the ground for money, but not in these times.

REMEMBER THAT I HAVE WARNED YOU

"Except for the one trade that currency is a little tight, I see no cloud on the horizon."

"I am a better financial weather prophet for this one time than the Wall Street Journal," declared Phillip confidently. "In a very few days I will show you a cloud that will cover this entire district like a blanket of midnight. I know something, I tell you."

This was the fourth or fifth time since he had first come into the office that young Kelvin had ventured such dire predictions, and in spite of the fact that, except for the growing scarcity of actual currency, there was no hint or trace of trouble to come, Henry Gallien began to be a trifle impressed by them, so much so that he began speaking of the matter to others of his kind in the offices of Raleigh & Raleigh, of Wilde & Co. of Booker & Watson and of R. P. Eldridge the other brokers.

Concerns that were acting as Kelvin's agents, Phillip dropped the same seed, and from these five centers, aided by Rensselaer, there gradually radiated a note of inquiry. Was the market in a really healthy condition? Was there an impending break? No one could tell.

In the meantime Kelvin steadily sold his twenty stocks in 1,000 share lots. He became known as the "cash bear," and there were a dozen conflicting theories as to how he had got his money. Young Rensselaer took a great fancy to him and before he had been on the market a week had him in at Kelvin's for dinner with a lot of the big guns of the market. It was discovered that Kelvin distinctly knew how to comport himself in any company. The only thing of note he said during that dinner was that he confidently looked forward to the biggest crash in the history of the street. They heard this remark in amused silence, but in the main they liked him. Rensselaer, one of the conservatives of the railroad group and of vast experience, was

"Square Dealing, Low Prices."

Why not turn over a new leaf? You have possibly paid out between $240.00 and $500.00 for the use of rented furniture since Easter one year ago. What a nice little home that money would have furnished. As it is all you have to show for this money is the landlord's receipts.

What good are they now? Will it be the same old story next Easter, or do you intend to start a home of your own? Come in to see us. We will "show you." We will help you. You may have the use of the furniture while paying for it—Pay a little each month.

Game From Eastern League Champs
by 35-21 Score—Andy Sears is in Game and Swenson Plays for O'Donnell.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—So far as the world's basketball championship is concerned, the De Neri team, title holder of the Eastern League, was virtually eliminated Saturday night, when it lost the second straight game to the McKeesport five, top notchers in the Central League. Score 35 to 21.

The contest played at the American Athletic Club, Thirty-ninth and Market streets, attracted a crowd of about 1,000, the majority of whom were downtowners, who have followed De Neri all through the Eastern League campaign.

The "Tubers" won the game on their ability to land baskets, when they most needed them. De Neri had more shots for the baskets than the Central stars, but whenever the downtown players would shoot they invariably went wide of the mark.

In passing De Neri showed a trifle more form than the Western Pennsylvania, but most of it was done when the locals had no chance to score. They were kept away from the basket most of the time, while the "Tubers" shots were much faster and better executed.

Bogio, the speedy little forward on the McKeesport team, was the star scorer. He made four from the field, while the next closest man was Sears, with a pair. Several of Bogio's goals were landed from difficult angles. His best basket was scored with one hand late in the final period.
McKeesport's guards almost overwhelmed De Neri. They outplayed the De Neri forwards, and gave the locals very few chances to do anything in the open. The local team was held to two field goals Wilson and Gordy each getting one.

There was very little difference in the playing of the two centers. Lukens put up a pretty game against the high jumping Getzinger, the latter scoring but one goal on "Lukes".

Included in McKeesport's line-up was Andy Sears, the unsentational foul goal shooter, who was unable to play in the opening game of the series.
Out of 27 chances, Sears landed 17 from the 16-foot mark, while Wilson, of the De Neri team, totalling the same number out of 30 attempts.
Sears did not play the floor game that was anticipated. In the opinion of the enthusiasts, Joe Fogarty, the South Philadelphia, who played to Sears' place last Saturday night, is a better floor worker. There is virtually no difference in the ability of the two men when it comes to shooting fools. Fogarty, who caused so much comment by playing with the "Tubers" in the opening clash, viewed the game from the side lines Saturday night.

The lineup:
McKeesport—Sears, De Neri—21.
Bogio, Forward, Wilson, Guard,
Getzinger, Center, Lukens,
Gordy, Center, Krueger,
Morris, Guard, Brooks.
Field Goals—Bogio 4, Sears 2, Swenson, Getzinger, Morris, Wilson, Gordy.
Aids—Bogio, Center, Brooks.
Foul Goals—Sears 17 out of 27; Wilson, 17 out of 30.

This "Stevens" sale is an advertisement, proposition pure and simple—your advantage is a superior grade of goods at a special low price—my goal is making 500 new acquaintances, and winning their confidence.

Stevens mountings are the best in the world—they occupy the same position in the optical trade as "Rogers Bros., 1847" do in the silver line, and "Elgin" or "Waltham" do in the watch business.

SUCH A STARTLING ANNOUNCE-MENT no doubt makes you ask if it is absolutely bonafide and if so why do it. The whole story is this. I have decided to make this unheard of sacrifice of regular $3.50 and $5.00 gold-filled glasses at $1 for balance of week to gain the full support and patronage of Connelville people and thus build up an extensive optical business. The lenses are the same I sell in my regular lines, every one fully guaranteed, and I use just as much care in fitting your eyes. Difficult cases a specialty.

Headaches and nervousness and other troubles far removed from the eyes are oftentimes the direct result of an eye strain which is corrected with the proper glasses would give immediate relief. It is not necessary for the eye to be sore to indicate the need of glasses. In many cases the eye may be perfectly healthy and glasses may be needed for the reason which are only apparent to the physician, and skilled eye specialist.

EXAMINATION FREE

During this wonderful sale I will be in charge and every patient will get a scientific examination and glasses properly adjusted. REMEMBER I am making this sale to build up my business and cannot afford to overcharge.
Special prices during sale on specially

Most Remarkable Silk Sale Ever

Over 900 Yards 35 inch Black Silk 20c to 40c Under Price.

We had been doing the silk business so well that we thought the best things to be had were shown here until this consignment of black silks came to our notice. Quality and price—the lot is the best that ever came to this store. The more critical you are, the more appreciative you'll be. We think we can convince the most skeptical persons who will give the goods and prices a chance, that on silks—these black silks, in particular—buyers will do better here than ever before.

Black Silks are Very Stylish

Ordinarily it would appear incredible that black would ever come greatly into vogue for young people's wear, but the unexpected has happened.
There is not one idea as evident as black silk coats and suits for children, right now.

Nor is it confined there but, beginning with the smallest child the fashion extends to girls, misses and mature women.
